Total Number of Patients admitted since the establishment of the Hospital in 1802, 54,059.

REPORT

FOR THE YEAR ENDING DECEMBER 31ST, 1868.

THE Committee have to report that through 1868 the Hospital has maintained the character for unprecedented usefulness claimed for it in the six previous years. The number of patients admitted into the Hospital during 1868 was 3657, being an increase of 856 over the number admitted in 1867, and exceeding by 47 the largest number admitted in any previous year of the Hospital's history (3610 in 1864). In the course of the past seven years (1862-68) the number of patients admitted has amounted to 21,809, or to more than two-thirds of the aggregate admissions during the previous sixty years of the Hospital's existence (32,250). This great increase in the number of persons who have sought relief from the Hospital of late years must not be ascribed solely to an increased prevalence of fever, but must be attributed partly to an altered policy on the part of the Committee of Management, whereby, instead of rejecting patients when the wards have been full, the Hospital has from time to time been extended to meet the requirements of the public, and partly to the parochial authorities having been roused to a sense of the danger of treating cases of contagious fever in the wards of workhouse infirmaries, and to their now transferring all such cases at once to the Fever Hospital.

The female patients admitted in 1868 exceeded the male by 215.

The number of admissions was large in every month of the year. From 256 in January, it fell to 218 in April; thence it gradually rose, until in October and November the admissions reached the unprecedented numbers of 420, and 409, the admissions in each of these months considerably exceeding the total admissions for the year 1860 (391). The daily average number of patients in the hospital for the entire year was 209, or 24 in excess of that in any previous year. The highest daily average for any one month was 279 in November; the lowest was 159 in July. The largest number of patients ever in the Hospital at one time was 313 on November 27th, 1868; the smallest number during 1868 was 135 on July 15th.

In the following Table the number of patients admitted and treated during 1868 is contrasted with the corresponding numbers for the six previous years :—

Of the 3657 patients admitted during the past year 2996 were suffering from specific fevers; while in 661 the febrile symptoms were the result of local disease, the nature of which was obscure or had been misapprehended. Of the specific fevers there were of Concerning each kind of fever a more detailed statement may be made.

Typhus Fever, or the fever whose origin and propagation are due to destitution and overcrowding, is the disease on which the variations in the number of admissions into the Fever Hospital mainly depends. The small number of patients admitted in the years 1858-61, and the unprecedented numbers in the last seven years, have been in a great measure due to the almost complete absence of typhus in the former case, and to its great prevalence in the latter. In the year 1858 the number of patients admitted with typhus was only 15, and during seven months only one case was observed; but in the last seven years the annual number has varied from 1319 to 2497, and of the total 21,809 cases admitted, 12,693 have been cases of typhus. The number of typhus cases, however, in 1868 exceeded that of 1865 by only 10, and was exceeded in 1864 by no less than 526. Throughout the epidemic males (6246) and females (6447) have been admitted with typhus fever in almost equal numbers; in 1868 the females were slightly (97) in excess of the males. As usual, a large proportion of the typhus patients admitted during the past year had been out of employment and in a very destitute state for a long time prior to their attack. The localities from which they were mainly brought were the poorest and most densely crowded of the eastern, central, and southern districts of London.

Of the 1971 typhus patients admitted during 1868, the characteristic eruption on the skin was noted in 1962, or in 96.5 per cent.

The principal complications were as follows:—

Pulmonary complications, including extreme Congestion, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, &c.	218, of whom 60 died.
Abscess of lung	2, who died.
Tonsillitis	1
Glossitis, with Abscess below the tongue	1
Hæmatemasis	1, who died.
Diarrhœa	40, of whom 10 died.
Dysentery	1, who died.
Hæmorrhage from the bowels	1 ,,
Ulceration of tongue	1
Convulsions	22, of whom 20 died.
Retention of Urine	30 ,, 18 ,,
Purulent discharge from ears	2
Epistaxis	3 ,, 1 ,,
Catalepsy	1, who died.
Keratitis...	1 ,,
Strabismus	1 ,,
Parotid bubo, or abscess	22, of whom 9 died.
,, with erysipelas of fauces and larynx... ...	2, who died.
Inflammation of glands of neck...	2
Phlebitis...	4
Bed-sores	16, of whom 6 died.
Gangrenous ulceration of chest	1, who died.
Excoriation of scrotum...	1
Erysipelas	6
Gangrene of feet	1, ,,
Ulcers of legs	9, of whom 5 died.
Pregnancy (of whom 6 aborted and 1 was delivered at full time)...	16, all recovered.

Enteric Fever is the fever whose prevalence is connected with bad drainage and bad drinking water, and which is characterized by a tendency to increase in autumn, or after a long continuance of hot weather. The cases admitted during 1868 numbered 461, and have only been exceeded in two previous years, viz., in 1865 and 1866. During the seventeen years, 1848-64, the annual admissions for enteric fever varied from 137 to 252, except in 1860, remarkable for its cold and rainy summer, when only 94 cases were admitted, owing to an absence of the ordinary autumnal increase. But during the four years 1865-8, the admissions for enteric fever have numbered 520, 575, 378, and 461. But a small proportion of this remarkable increase can fairly be referred to the increased accommodation arising from the extension of the Hospital, and there can be little doubt that the excessive prevalence of this disease in London, and throughout England, is in a great measure to be ascribed to an exaggeration of the climatic conditions that habitually favour its development—to circumstances, in fact, the converse of what were noted in 1860. It was during the extreme heat of 1865, that tropical Yellow Fever was for the first time introduced into England; it was in the remarkably hot July of 1866, that the last epidemic of Asiatic cholera broke out in London, and the tropical summer of 1868 is still fresh in our memories. In 1868, the month of September was that in which the largest number of cases was admitted (93), and in the three months, August, September, and October, more than one-half (236) of the admissions for the entire year were received. The number of males (227) admitted with enteric fever was almost the same as that of the females (234). The skin eruption of enteric fever was present in 330 cases, or in 71.5 per cent. The principal complications and sequelæ observed in the cases of enteric fever were as follows :—

Pulmonary complications, including Pneumonia...	75, of whom 27 died.
Abscess of lung	1, who died.
Laryngitis	1 ,,
Peritonitis...	13 ,,
Hæmorrhage from bowels (copious)	8, of whom 4 died.
Convulsions	1, who recovered.
Otorrhœa...	4, of whom 1 died.
Epistaxis (copious)...	3

Bed-sores	3 of whom 1 died.
Gangrene of ears	1
Erysipelas	2
Parotid swelling	5 ,, 3 ,,
Abscess of mamma...	1
,, of neck	1
Phlebitis	2
Sloughing of nates or perinæum	2
Necrosis of tibia	1
Pregnancy (of whom 1 aborted)	3, all recovered.
Relapse of the fever	18, of whom 1 died.
Laryngitis	1, who died.

The number of cases registered under the head of SIMPLE CONTINUED FEVER or FEBRICULA was 132 (54 males and 78 females).

During 1868, SCARLET FEVER was very prevalent in London and throughout England. Prior to 1868, the largest number of scarlet fever admissions was in 1864, when 284 cases were received; but in 1868 the cases numbered 399 (151 males and 248 females) Many of the cases were complicated with inflammatory enlargement of the glands of the neck; convulsions occurred in 4 cases; urgent diarrhœa in 5; pulmonary complications in 8; erysipelas in 2; phlebitis in 1; sloughing of the eyeball in 1; and chorea in 1. The most interesting complication was acute rheumatism, which was observed in no fewer than 26 cases, in several of which there was also either pericarditis or endocarditis.

Not one case of the disease known as RELAPSING FEVER, whose prevalence is connected with extreme destitution in a more intimate degree than even that of typhus, and which constituted a great part of the Irish epidemic fever that followed the potato famine of 1846-7, had been admitted into the Hospital for 14 years. But on July 4, 1868, a girl aged 20 was admitted, from 12, Easington's Buildings, Whitechapel,* who presented the usual symptoms of the disease. She was of Irish birth, but had resided for 8 years in London, and had not been in a particularly destitute condition. Four days later, a Polish Jewess, aged 32, who could not speak English, and whose length of residence in London could not be ascertained, was received from

* Easington's Buildings and Inkhouse Court are about a quarter of a mile apart. They are both culs de sac, very narrow, and densely populated, the former by Irish, and the latter by foreign Jews—all very poor.

8, Inkhouse Court, Whitechapel, with the same disease, and on July 30, a third case was admitted from 9, Inkhouse Court—a girl aged 14, who had resided in London all her life. In addition to these three cases, it may be added that a girl, aged 7, who had lived in London all her life, was admitted on the same day and from the same house as the first case, whose illness was registered as "febricula," and was probably also relapsing fever; and that on July 6, a Polish family, consisting of father, mother, and child, were admitted from 8, Inkhouse Court, in a state of extreme debility and destitution, without any marked febrile symptoms, during the seven days that they remained in the Hospital. There is no evidence of the recent existence of relapsing fever in Ireland or elsewhere in the British dominions; but during the past year German physicians have noted the prevalence of relapsing fever in East Prussia and Poland, and have ascribed it to "the great destitution and want of food," and in the course of last autumn and of the present winter a considerable number of Polish Jews, most of whom had been lately residing in Whitechapel, have been admitted into the German Hospital in London, suffering from well-marked relapsing fever.* It is probable, therefore, that in the few instances of relapsing fever observed at the London Fever Hospital, the disease had been contracted from Polish immigrants.

The following table shows the multifarious nature of the "Other Diseases" sent to the Fever Hospital, the patient in every instance having been certified to be suffering from "contagious fever." It has always been the policy of the Hospital to take in cases that are likely to become fever of a contagious nature, as well as the actually developed disease, in order to encourage the speedy removal of fever cases at their earliest stages. The physicians acknowledge that there is often much difficulty in deciding whether a particular case is, or is not, likely to become "fever;" yet, if reasonable judgment had been used in the selection of patients by those who sent them, the following list would have been much less extensive, and the difficulty of receiving and classifying the cases that were really contagious, would in many instances have been greatly diminished.

* One of these cases, admitted with Rheumatic Fever, died of Typhus contracted in the Hospital.

The Committee are glad to be able to report that, notwithstanding the unprecedented number of patients in the Hospital, the rate of mortality was less than it has been for many years, and, in fact, was one of the smallest on record in the annals of the Hospital. Of the total number of patients in the Hospital, after deducting 42 cases of small-pox and of other diseases which were transferred to the parish infirmaries or to other Hospitals, 3558 were under treatment until the termination of their illness, and of this number 543 died, or the mortality was 15.26 per cent. Deducting 66 cases, of which 2 were dead before reaching the Hospital and the remainder were moribund or died within twenty-four hours of admission, the mortality fell to 13.66 per cent. ; and deducting 63 other cases fatal within forty-eight hours of admission, the mortality was only 12.07 per cent.

Of 2,516 cases of Typhus, Enteric Fever, Relapsing Fever, and Febricula, ordinarily included under the common designation of "continued fever," or "typhus," 368, or 14.62 per cent., died. Deducting 31 cases moribund on admission, or dying within twenty-four hours, the mortality fell to 13.56 per cent., and deducting 37 others, fatal within forty-eight hours, the mortality was only 12.25 per cent.

Of 1908 cases of typhus alone, 297 proved fatal, or 15.56 per cent. Among the male patients, the mortality was 16.55 per cent. ; among the females, 14.68 per cent. Deducting 29 cases moribund on admission, or fatal within twenty-four hours, the mortality was 14.26 per cent. ; and deducting 32 other cases, fatal within forty-eight hours of admission, the mortality was 12.77 per cent. Of the fatal cases of typhus, a large number were complicated with local diseases, as has already been shown. But the circumstance that most influenced the rate of mortality was the age of the patients. The annexed Table* of the typhus patients admitted during 1868, shows that considerably more than one-fourth of the entire number were above forty years of age, and at the same time the remarkable influence of age on the rate of mortality. Thus of 151 cases between the ages of 5 and 10, only one was fatal, whereas of 151 cases over fifty years of age, 82, or considerably more than one-half, were fatal.

* This Table refers solely to the patients admitted during 1868, all of whose diseases have now terminated. Patients admitted in 1868 and dying in 1869 are included among the deaths. This accounts for the total numbers of the Table not corresponding to those in the text, in which the calculation is based on the number of patients treated until the termination of their illness in 1868.

Of 465 cases of Enteric Fever treated in the Hospital during 1868 till the termination of their illness, 71 proved fatal, or the mortality was 15.3 per cent. Among the male patients (13.43 per cent.), the mortality was somewhat less than among the females (17.09 per cent.) Deducting 2 cases fatal within twenty-four hours of admission, the mortality was 14.91 per cent.; and deducting 4 others fatal within forty-eight hours, it was 14.17 per cent. In most of the fatal cases, as has already been shown, death was due to some local complication, but the above Table shows that the mortality was not influenced by age in the same way as that of typhus.

The mortality from SCARLET FEVER was 10.2 per cent (382 cases, and 39 deaths). Deducting one case where death had occurred before reaching the Hospital, and 7 others fatal within twenty-four hours of admission, the mortality was 8.28 per cent. ; and deducting further three other cases fatal within forty-eight hours of admission, it was 7.54 per cent.

There was no death in the Hospital during the year from relapsing fever, small-pox, or measles.

The mortality among the cases which were not specific fever, was high, as it always is in the Fever Hospital. It is only when cases of acute local disease assume a severe asthenic type that they are liable to be mistaken for "fever," and sent to the Hospital. After deducting 30 cases transferred to the parish infirmaries or to other hospitals, 640 cases remained, of which 136, or 21.25 per cent., were fatal. But of this number one patient had expired before reaching the Hospital, and 26 others were moribund, or died within twenty-four hours of admission. Deducting these cases, the mortality was reduced to 17.77 per cent., and deducting 24 other cases fatal within forty-eight hours of admission, it was still further reduced to 14.43 per cent.

The large number of contagious cases admitted during the year have, of course, not been treated with immunity to the attendants. During the year 25 nurses, 3 scrubbers, and 2 laundry-maids contracted typhus. In other words, out of about 130 persons engaged during the year in the management of the Hospital, 30 caught the fever ; but it is satisfactory to add that of this number all recovered excepting 2—a nurse and a scrubber ; the former died of an attack of inflammation of the lungs while convalescing from typhus. It has more than once been argued that the number of attendants who contract typhus in the London Fever Hospital is due to a faulty construction of the building, and a consequent concentration of the poison. After no small experience, the physicians are firmly of opinion that no wards could be better adapted for the treatment of typhus fever than those of the London Fever Hospital ; and they venture further to predict that even with the most lavish outlay of money no hospital will be ever constructed in which the attendants, if unprotected by a previous attack of the disease, will escape taking it.

They suffer, and will continue to do so, not from any general concentration of the poison in the wards, but from their avocations bringing them of necessity into close relations with the sick. There is only one remedy, and that is, after securing a staff of seasoned nurses, to make it worth their while to remain, and to avoid those frequent changes in the staff to which the many cases of fever among the attendants in the London Fever Hospital must be ascribed. In the year 1868, no fewer than 37 fresh nurses, 15 laundry-women, and 11 scrubbers were engaged, and yet nurses have been known to enjoy good health in the Fever Hospital for twenty years after their first attack of typhus. During the last few years the Committee of Management have added greatly to the pay and comforts of the nurses, and they are prepared to consider what further measures can be adopted to prevent the frequent changes referred to. In the meantime, it is a source of some gratification to find that, contrary to what has been observed in other institutions, the mortality among the attendants attacked with typhus has been very much below the ordinary typhus mortality, a favourable result which is explained by the practice that has prevailed at the Hospital for some years, of engaging young nurses, in whom the disease is much less likely to be fatal than in persons more advanced in life. In addition to the attendants who were attacked with typhus, 7 out of 1650 patients admitted with other diseases than typhus* took this fever, which in one instance was fatal. During the year, also, 3 nurses and 1 patient admitted with typhus contracted scarlet fever; and a nurse and 1 patient admitted with scarlet fever contracted enteric fever: all six recovered. The small number of such casualties shows that there can be no great concentration of fever-poison in the Fever Hospital. During the past year similar casualties have been far more numerous in the general hospitals of London, which, collectively, have admitted not a tithe of the cases of typhus and scarlet fever received into the Fever Hospital, and some of which have at last been compelled, from the spread of fever, to decline admitting more cases.

* When admitted, two of these patients were suffering from enteric fever, in one of whom the symptoms of typhus did not appear until three days after his discharge. Two were admitted with scarlet fever, and three with diseases which were not specific fever. It was one of the last three cases that was fatal.

Mischievous fallacies can hardly be too often refuted, and it is therefore worth while to insist again that a few casualties of this sort in the Fever Hospital constitute no reason for diffusing fever cases through the wards of general hospitals. The objections raised against Fever Hospitals are two—viz., 1, that the concentration of the poison lessens the chances of the patients' recovery; and, 2, that the concentration of the poison increases the danger to the attendants. The validity of these objections may be tested by comparing the results of the London Fever Hospital with those of six of the principal general hospitals in the metropolis.

During the first six months of 1862, 1107 cases of true typhus were under treatment in the London Fever Hospital, of which number 232 died, or the mortality was 20.95 per cent. In the same period, 343 cases of typhus were under treatment in six of the large general hospitals in London, of which number 80 died, or 23.32 per cent. The 1080 (1107—27) cases admitted into the Fever Hospital communicated the disease to 27 persons, of whom 8 died. In other words, only 1 person took the fever for every 40 admitted, and only 1 died for every 135. But the 272 cases admitted into the six general hospitals communicated the disease to 71 persons, of whom 21 died; or 1 person caught the fever for every 3.8 cases admitted, and 1 life was lost for every 12.6 cases admitted. The experience of 1868 would be much more in favour of the Fever Hospital, notwithstanding the large number of nurses attacked. Thus the mortality in the past year, among the typhus patients, was only 15.56 per cent., although more than one-fifth of the entire deaths occurred within 48 hours of the patients' admission; while only 1 person took the fever for every 53 admitted, and only 1 life was lost for every 656 cases admitted.

It appears, then, that the objections raised against a Fever Hospital with thorough ventilation, however plausible in theory, are not justified by facts, and that a given number of typhus patients can be treated on the plan of isolation with equal advantage to themselves and with far less danger to the attendants and other patients than in the wards of a general hospital. With perfect ventilation, there need be no more concentration of fever-poison in a fever ward than in a general ward with a sprinkling of fever cases, and in the former case there will be no danger of other patients contracting fever. It may fairly be asked, what would have been the effect if there had been no Fever Hospital in London, and if the 12,753 cases of contagious typhus admitted into it during the last seven years, had been distributed through the general hospitals, in addition to the few hundreds actually treated in them.

The patients received into the Fever Hospital may be divided into three classes—viz., 1, domestic servants, policemen, clerks, shopmen in houses of business, and members of private families, for whom an admission-fee of Two Guineas is paid; 2, working men and members of their families, who are admitted free; and 3, the poor who are either inmates of the metropolitan workhouses, or who, in sickness, are compelled to seek parochial relief. From the subjoined Table it will be seen that in 1868, as in former years, the patients belonging to the pauper class greatly outnumbered those of the other classes, constituting, in fact, nearly 90 per cent. of the total admissions.

The proportion of pauper cases has increased considerably within the last few years, owing, no doubt, to the parochial authorities entertaining more enlightened views as to their duty in regard to the fever-stricken poor, who are now sent to the Hospital, instead of being treated in their crowded dwellings or removed to the workhouses. In the next Table (page 21) the patients received in 1868 are classified according to the several districts of London whence they were brought. The Table shows also the nature and the rate of mortality of the fevers contributed by each district. It gives instructive information of a kind that especially concerns the sanitary authorities of London, as well as those engaged in the construction of the future Fever Asylums.

When compared with the corresponding Tables in previous Reports, it shows that the districts of the metropolis in which fever is most prevalent vary at different times. Typhus fever, for instance, in the year 1865, was most prevalent in the central and south districts, but during the last three years it has prevailed chiefly in the east districts. The following Table shows the districts from which patients suffering from typhus were received into the Fever Hospital during the last four years, and the number from each :—

	1865.	1866.	1867.	1868.
West Districts	188	93	52	39
North Districts	235	362	129	89
Central Districts	522	345	272	403
East Districts	383	603	666	1014
South Districts	582	262	235	381

In the next place, it is important to note that the rate of mortality is not, cæteris paribus, affected by the distance that the patient is conveyed to the Hospital. The mortality among the patients brought from Islington, in which the Hospital stands, is actually greater than that among the patients from Greenwich or Bermondsey, while the mortality among the patients from the north and central districts greatly exceeded that among the patients from the eastern districts, and was almost three times as great as among those from the west districts ; and in the two instances where death had occurred before the patients reached the Hospital, they had been brought from the adjoining parishes of Shoreditch and St. Luke's. Possibly in other years the proportion of deaths among the patients from the different districts might be reversed ; but the fact of the results for 1868 being as now stated is sufficient to show that the mortality is not seriously affected by the distance that the patient is removed. There is no evidence that in one parish a selection of patients to be sent has been made more than in another ; and, in fact, there is reason to believe, as will appear in the sequel, that during the past year the rule has been to remove all pauper patients suffering from fever to the Fever Hospital. The injury to a fever patient is not to be measured by the distance of his removal, but rather by the want of proper precautions during the removal, and by this being too long delayed after the commencement of the illness. If a patient suffering from severe typhus or any other fever be placed semi-erect in an ordinary cab, and thus conveyed even for a short distance, it is not surprising that on reaching the Hospital he should occasionally be found dead at the bottom of the vehicle, or that he should die a few hours after admission. Through the kindness of the "Hospital Carriage Fund," the Fever Hospital has been for some years provided with two properly constructed ambulances—one for conveying fever patients to the Fever Hospital, and the other for conveying small-pox patients to the Small-pox Hospital. These ambulances are sent to any part of London, on application being made by telegraph or otherwise to the Resident Medical Officer at the Hospital. They are, however, not intended for pauper patients, and it is therefore the duty of the parishes, which have not already done so, to provide similar ambulances for the conveyance of the poor suffering from contagious diseases.

* In the "Typhus," "Enteric," and "Scarlet" columns of this Table, Patients admitted free, by Governors' orders, or by payment, are classified, as far as possible; but the parish in which they had lived, in some instances, could not be ascertained. In the last column, those sent by the Parishes are alone considered, and the residual number, 300, includes those admitted free or by Governors' orders, as well as police, parish poor, &c. The Table refers solely to the patients admitted during 1868. Patients admitted in 1868 and dying in 1869, are included among the deaths.

Till September, 1867, the payment made to the Hospital in respect of paupers was at the rate of one shilling a day, or considerably less than half the sum which they cost to the institution. The Committee abstained from requiring a larger payment for this class, fearing that if they did so, parochial authorities would, in many instances, from mistaken motives of economy, retain their fever patients, unmindful of the calamitous consequences. In the interest of humanity, therefore, the Committee preferred to trust to a benevolent public to make up the deficiency in the payment made by the parochial authorities; while, in order to meet the demand for accommodation for pauper patients, the Committee during the last seven years have greatly enlarged the Hospital premises, adding two permanent wings, capable of accommodating 130 patients, besides on one occasion erecting a temporary iron shed. The result has been that during the last six years, while the Hospital, in addition to its more legitimate duties, has been discharging those which are soon to be undertaken by three new Fever Asylums, no case has been refused admission.

On the passing of the Metropolitan Poor Act of 1867 the Committee deemed it right that from the 29th of September, 1867, when the expense of maintaining fever patients chargeable to parishes was thrown on the Metropolitan Common Poor Fund, the parochial authorities should pay 2s. 4d.* per day for each patient sent by them to the Hospital, being the actual cost of maintenance of the average patient, without including what may be termed establishment expenses. This increased charge has been readily acquiesced in, and, as the erection of none of the new asylums has been commenced, it is probable that one or two years must still elapse before they are ready for the reception of poor fever patients, and that in the meantime the parochial authorities will gladly avail themselves of the accommodation which the Fever Hospital affords.

In accordance with the arrangement just referred to, the Hospital during the year 1868 received the sum of £7,608 0s. 10d. for pauper cases,—but a small proportion, it is to be feared, of the amount which the pauper fever patients, even when far less numerous than in 1868,* will, under the new arrangements, cost the ratepayers of London.

* Equivalent to £42 11s. 8d. per bed for the entire year.

The Committee are well aware that the fact of the patients consisting to so large an extent of persons from the lowest class of the poor of the metropolis has prevented other classes from resorting to the Hospital; and they do not doubt that when the pauper element is removed, domestic servants, clerks, shopmen, artisans, and even members of private families will be prepared, in far greater numbers, than heretofore, to avail themselves of the special advantages which the Hospital offers. It will be a matter for the consideration of the Committee how best to adapt the Hospital to the altered circumstances in which it will shortly be placed.

When it is remembered that the Fever Hospital, in a peculiar degree, benefits not only the sick person himself, but those also from among whom he is taken, and that not even the great endowed hospitals of London equal it in the number of persons whom sickness drives to seek relief within its walls, the Institution must be regarded as in the very first rank for usefulness among the great charities of the country. With this sense of the magnitude and importance of their Hospital, the Committee appeal with confidence to the public for increased support, to enable them to maintain its present efficiency, and to effect those changes which will be necessary when the contributions from the parishes cease.

C. M.

* There is evidence that few pauper patients, suffering from typhus, are at present treated out of the Fever Hospital. Since the commencement of the present year the different forms of continued fever have for the first time been distinguished in the reports of the Registrar-General. Fifteen deaths from typhus are registered as having occurred in the whole of London in the week ending January 23. Nine of these occurred in the Fever Hospital. Making allowance for cases dying in the general hospitals, for cases not belonging to the pauper class, and for the frequency with which death is referred to typhus, when due to some disease entirely distinct, it is clear that but a small margin remains for pauper cases not received into the Fever Hospital.

CHAS. FINN, Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL,

LIVERPOOL ROAD, ISLINGTON.

LAWS AND REGULATIONS.

Objects of the Institution.

1. ALL poor persons (not being parochial paupers) and domestic servants of subscribers, labouring under contagious fever, and residing in the metropolis or its neighbourhood, shall be considered proper objects for this charity, and shall be admitted gratuitously, according to the next regulation. Parochial paupers, domestic servants, and non-subscribers, and all inmates of other public charities (except medical hospitals), shall be admitted on the payment of such sum for each patient as the Committee shall from time to time determine.

2. On application for the admission of any patient to the Hospital, notice shall be immediately given to the resident medical officer, and the person after inspection may be admitted by an order signed by him, or on a certificate signed by any physician, surgeon, or apothecary, stating the disease to be fever of a contagious nature, or likely to become such The order or certificate shall entitle the patient to admission, subject to the provisions contained in Rule No. 1, unless the case shall be deemed an improper one by the resident medical officer, or unless the Hospital shall be full.

Governors.

3. All subscribers of one guinea annually, or of ten guineas in one donation, shall be governors of this Hospital.

General Meeting and Election of the Committee.

4. A general meeting of the governors, of which ten days' previous notice must be given in three morning newspapers, shall be held every year, on the second Friday in February, or as near thereto as may be convenient, for the purpose of approving or rescinding the proceedings of the Committee for the preceding year; for receiving an annual report of the state of the funds; and for electing a president, vice-presidents, treasurer, honorary secretary, and other members of the Committee for the ensuing year. At all meetings connected with the affairs of the Hospital, a simple majority of the governors present and voting shall bind the minority; and in case of equality of votes, the chairman shall have an additional vote or casting vote.

5. A special general meeting of the governors may at any time be called, by direction of the president or of the Committee; or on the requisition of any twelve governors, provided the requisition be made in writing to the secretary, and the purpose for which the same is summoned be published in three morning newspapers at least ten days prior to the next meeting; but the proceedings of such special general meeting, though acted upon pro tempore, shall not be deemed final, until confirmed by another general meeting.

6. No new rule or law shall be made, nor shall any existing rule or law be repealed or altered, until determined upon at a general meeting by a majority of governors present and voting, and until confirmed at a subsequent general or special meeting.

7. The presence of seven governors shall be necessary to constitute a quorum at general meetings, and without that number no business shall be transacted.

8. At the annual general meeting, a Committee for the management of the Institution shall be elected, consisting of the president, the vice-presidents, the treasurer, honorary secretary, and twenty-four other governors; four of which governors shall not have been members of the preceding Committee. They shall meet on the last Friday, or on such other day of every month as the Committee may appoint; and three members shall be necessary to constitute a meeting, and to transact business. A special meeting of the Committee may be called by the direction of the treasurer, or by any three members of the Committee, on giving at least three days' notice of the same, and specifying the business for which it is called.

9. The Committee shall have authority to appoint sub-committees, whose reports shall be submitted to their consideration; they shall elect all the officers, except the physicians of the Hospital and the honorary secretary, who shall be elected by the governors at large; and with the assistance of the medical officers, shall form regulations and bye-laws for the internal management of the Hospital.

10. The resolutions of one meeting of the Committee shall not be rescinded by another, unless it be specially summoned for that purpose. All accounts, except such small sums as may be comprised under the item of petty cash, shall be submitted to the Committee at the monthly meetings, after having been duly examined by the secretary, the resident medical officer, and the house-directors; and such accounts, if approved, shall be paid by cheques payable to order, signed in Committee by the chairman and one other member, or, in case a Committee cannot be formed, by two of the house-directors, and in all cases countersigned by the secretary. All the larger articles of supply, when practicable, shall be furnished by contract made after public tender. No expenditure for repairs of premises or any machinery shall be incurred, without a written order from the Committee or house-directors.

11. The Committee shall yearly publish a report of the state of the Hospital.

12. No person being a member of the Committee, shall furnish for profit any goods, provisions, or other articles, for the use of, or on account of, the Hospital, or be concerned in any contract for supplying the same, or be employed for hire, or wages, or profit, in any office or employment under the charity.

Treasurer.

13. The treasurer, if present, shall take the chair at all meetings of the Committee, in the absence of the president or vice-presidents. He shall keep an account at the bankers, and all moneys received for the use of the Hospital shall be paid to such account; he shall honour all cheques signed, as provided in Rule 10; and the signature of the secretary shall be a sufficient warranty that the cheques purporting to be so signed are properly signed, and shall be an indemnity to the treasurer against risk.

Auditors.

14. Three gentlemen shall be appointed annually at the meeting of the Committee in November, who shall audit the accounts of the Institution for the current year, and approve an abstract of all receipts and disbursements to be prepared by the secretary, and laid before the annual general meeting in February.

Monthly Directors.

15. The Committee shall at each monthly meeting, appoint three members of their own body as directors of the Hospital, of whom two shall be a quorum, and who shall continue in office until the next monthly meeting of the Committee. The trustees and the two senior physicians shall be ex officio directors of the Hospital, in addition to three members to be appointed at each monthly meeting, as provided by this rule.

16. They shall from time to time cause the beds, clothes, and apparel belonging to the Hospital to be examined, and shall report thereon, if necessary, to the Committee. They shall inspect the tradesmen's bills, and take care that the provisions, bedding, clothing, furniture, and every article for the use of the Hospital, be supplied on the most reasonable terms ; they shall order in writing all permanent stores.

17. They shall be authorised in all respects to enforce the observance of the regulations of the Hospital ; they shall notice and report to the Committee any irregularity or misconduct on the part of the officers, servants, or patients of the charity, and shall, at every meeting of the Committee, cause a statement of the house expenditure to be produced for the preceding month. They shall appoint the porters, nurses, and other menial servants of the Hospital, and dismiss them for misconduct.

Physicians.

18. There shall be two physicians and two assistant physicians, who shall be Fellows or Members (formerly called Licentiates) of the Royal College of Physicians of London ; and also a consulting surgeon, who shall be a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons.

19. The physicians and assistant physicians shall be elected by the governors at large ; and no governor shall be qualified to vote, unless he shall have become a governor three months before a vacancy is declared.

20. One of the physicians shall visit the Hospital at least once every day, and at such times as they may deem necessary. They shall have the power of dismissing any patient or convalescent for refractory conduct or disobedience of orders.

Assistant Physicians.

21. In case of the illness or necessary absence of either of the physicians, one of the assistant physicians shall attend regularly in his stead. Such attendances are to be reported to the Committee.

Hospital Pupils.

22. No medical student shall be permitted to visit the Hospital unless in company with one of the physicians, and unless he is regularly entered or registered as a pupil.

Resident Medical Officer.

23. The resident medical officer shall reside constantly at the Hospital, and shall devote himself entirely to the duties of his office ; and, previously to his election, he shall be required to produce satisfactory testimonials to the Committee.

24. He shall superintend the patients between the visits of the physicians, and the dispensary shall be exclusively under his control. In the absence of the Committee and house directors, he shall be recognised as the head of the establishment.

25. Accurate registers of the patients admitted, as well as of the remedies employed for their recovery, shall be kept, which registers shall be the property of the Hospital; he shall produce a special report every month, to be laid before the Committee.

26. When the number of patients shall be great, a medical assistant shall be appointed by the house directors, subject to the confirmation of the Committee, and he shall receive such remuneration as the Committee shall from time to time determine.

Honorary Secretary.

27. There shall be an honorary secretary, who shall also be a member of the Committee, and chosen annually with them. He shall be at liberty to attend all deputations to public bodies and private persons. He shall communicate with persons concerning the affairs of the Hospital during the intervals between the monthly meetings of the Committee, and shall report to the Committee, at their next meeting, all special or important events that shall have occurred within his knowledge during the month. He shall also assist the treasurer in the discharge of his duties when necessary.

Secretary and House Steward.

28. The duties of this officer shall be to reside in the Hospital, if required by the Committee, and, in the absence of the house directors, to have the management of the domestic affairs of the Hospital, under the general superintendence of the resident medical officer. He shall be required to enter into a bond, with sufficient sureties, for the due and faithful performance of his duties. He shall also perform the several duties specified in the bye-laws.

Matron.

29. The duties of the matron shall principally relate to the wards, the kitchen, and the laundry. She shall exercise a strict superintendence over the nurses; shall have the charge of linen, bedding, glass, crockery, and ordinary kitchen and scullery stores, subject to the general supervision of the house steward; and shall visit every ward of the Hospital at least three times in the day. She shall also perform the several duties specified in the bye-laws.

Collector.

30. The duties of this officer shall be—

To call on subscribers and collect all donations and subscriptions of the Hospital; to give only authorised printed receipts for the same; to attend all meetings, when required ; to keep correct lists and duplicate lists of all donations and subscriptions, with the residences of the donors and subscribers made up from day to day ; to pay weekly all moneys he may receive to the bankers ; to deliver weekly to the secretary reports in writing of all moneys received and paid, with the balance at the bankers ; to keep the accounts regularly entered in the collector's cash book ; to deliver a copy of the annual report to each subscriber ; and to give such security, with sureties, for the due and faithful performance of his duties, as may be required.

Nurses.

31. The head nurse in each ward shall attend principally to the patients, and to the keeping of the wards clean and quiet.

32. The under nurses shall be under the direction of the head nurses, and shall perform the more menial offices of the Hospital.

Porter and Engineer.

33. The porter and the engineer shall be employed as the Committee or directors may think proper. They shall not absent themselves without the permission of the house directors or resident medical officer.

Trustees.

34. The legal estate in the lands, buildings, and premises of the Hospital shall be vested in three trustees, new trustees being appointed when vacancies occur at a general meeting of the governors.

35. All legacies of £100 and upwards, unless otherwise directed by the testators, shall be invested for the benefit of the Hospital, in the names of the three trustees.

36. No variation in the usual gratuities and fixed salaries shall be made, unless the Committee be specially summoned for that purpose, and unless the proposed addition or diminution be confirmed by a subsequent Committee.

Bye-laws.

37. The bye-laws which shall from time to time be made by the Committee shall be open to the inspection of any subscriber, and shall contain, among other things, a full specification of the duties of the resident medical officer, the matron, and other officers of the Institution, with the practices usually adopted for their election ; which specification shall be read out to every individual before his appointment, and referred to on all occasions of doubt.
